PROF CLARK HONORED WITH SOUTHERN CROSS.

From the Pueblo (Colo.) Chieftain we clip the following interesting item:

J. A. Clark, principal of the American Business College, has the distinction of possessing a Southern Cross of Honor. This was presented to Mr. Clark two years ago by Mrs. Maggie Randle, of Hickman, Ky., for the work done by his father in the Confederate army during the Civil War.

Mr. Clark's father, Joseph Dent Clark, was one of the famous Henderson scouts, a band of brave men who undertook dangerous trips as scouting parties. They were in command of Major Alexander and Mr. Clark is in possession of letters from Mr. Hamilton which tell, in a synoptical way some of the work done by the Henderson scouts.

Other letters tell of Mr. Clark joining the army when he was but a boy.

The following quotation from a letter to Mr. Clark will be interesting:

"I have not answered your inquiry as early as I expected on account of my being quite sick."

"I was at home last of July on parole 1863."

"Mr. Joe D. Clark and eight or ten boys wanted to go to the southern army. I say other boys for your papa was only a boy then. I will name some of them as I think your husband, J. A. Clark, will know them. T. A. Prather, Charlie Bacon, Lee Bradford, Jimmie McConnell, Pen Bull, Jack Newton, two or three others. When we set the time to start was reported to the Union army, they placed guards at different cross roads and main crossings, of all the important water courses. We were to meet at 2 o'clock p.m. at a very retired place in an old deadening. That day about 12 noon

Kaiser Wilhelm was reported as seriously ill from inflammation of the lungs as a result of exposure while visiting the battlefields. Prince Adalbert, his son, was reported as seriously wounded, and one report said he had died in a hospital. The fighting along the battle lines on each side of Germany continued with unabated fury. Photographs received showed the effect of the shells fired by the heavy German artillery, one projectile having gone entirely through the cathedral at Malines.

more trouble until we got to Wolf river near Memphis. There was a small guard at the crossing, but we charged them, ran them into their camp. Then we put our horses in swam them, but Joe D. Clark's mare drifted down into a drift and came very near drowning both him and his mare, and she was a very fine animal. I swam my horse in and moved some of the obstruction and they came out all right. Joe became a little discouraged, but soon got over it—he was brave and true. We had no more difficulty until we reached the southern army where he and the other boys of our squad were mustered in the regular service. I was not with the main army any more until General Hood made his march through Tennessee, then we were put to work as scouts for General Hood and General N. B. Forrest. Major W. L. Alexander can give you more of the particulars of the command. I saw him and he said he would write you as he is the only officer of the company living.

"Joe D. Clark was in several raids of importance and a brave and gallant scout which was kept in the advance guard and on the scout all the time. This much is correct as far as I have given it. Hoping you will excuse all grammatical errors and bad writing as I am a very poor scribe and 78 years old this month.

Respectfully yours,
E. C. CARTER,
Hickman, Ky."

No wonder the great German siege gun is such a terror. It hauls for twelve miles a projectile three feet long, weighing 1,800 pounds, and carrying six hundred pounds of nitro-glycerine or gun cotton. No fort ever constructed has been able to stop these death-dealing missiles, and every one upon which the big guns have been trained have been demolished.

Prof. Thatcher, of Burns, Tenn., was here Saturday looking for his 16 year old son, Thurston, who he says ran away from home Friday. The lad bought a ticket at Martin for Hickman, but he couldn't be located here. Young Thatcher has served two years as an apprentice in the printing business.

Big crowd in town Saturday and merchants did considerably more business than they expected. Even though the bottom has apparently dropped out of the cotton market, business seems to be picking up in a general way.

FOUR LEE LINE PILOTS WILL BE TRIED.

Four Mississippi river pilots who were employed in the Memphis-St. Louis trade by the Lee Line are under charges before the United States inspectors, and this week will face trial for hindering commerce by quitting their work because their demand for higher wages was not acceded to.

The case is probably the first which has developed locally under the federal statute on which the charges are based. The men claim they were in their rights.

The four pilots are Harry Fitzgerald, C. F. Nellis, Guy Walker and Eugene Hampton. The statute under which the men will be tried reads in part as follows:

"If any licensed officer shall, to the hinderance of commerce, wrongfully or unreasonably refuse to serve in his official capacity on any vessel as authorized by the terms of his certificate or license...his license shall be revoked or suspended."

The men are said to have demanded $125 a month or an increase of 25 per cent.

This is said to have been refused, and, according to the charges filed in the federal building, the four men then quit their employment.

The heavy rains of Thursday and Friday nights played havoc with our streets and resulted in a number of washouts on the county roads.

Madam—Is Your Underwear Form-Fitting or Straight Lines?

The illustrations above tell their own story.

One—the usual form of knit underwear for women—cut on straight lines at shoulders, sleeves and armholes, stretched into shape by the wearer.

The other—Athena Underwear—tailored into shape by the maker. The slanting downward of the shoulder and sleeves shapes the garment to the correct lines of the wearer. Full bust and tapering back.

SEVEN SPECIAL FEATURES ASK TO SEE THEM

THREE-CORNED GUSSET—Relieves strain in garment at thigh. Insures greater comfort, longer wear.

PATENTED SEAT—Most notable improvement ever made in underwear designing, so shaped that it clings to the figure in any position.

PERFECTED SHOULDER-STAY—Keeps garment from stretching across shoulder, and holds sleeve in place.

CURVED-CUT ARMHOLE—Brings the garment snugly to the body, without unnecessary cloth, causing uncomfortable perspiration and tearing the armhole of one's best frock.

FITTED SHOULDER AND SLEEVE—Give natural form to bust and proper tapering to back.

EXTRA-ELASTIC CUFF—Holds the sleeve in place and keeps it from slipping up on the arm.

ATHENA LOW-NECK SLEEVELESS GARMENT is narrowed at back, with extra-full bust—lower in front than at back. No slipping of shoulder-straps down over arms.

And Athena Underwear costs no more than ordinary underwear

The J. P. and D. C. Maddox public sale last Thursday was largely attended, the crowd being estimated at between 400 and 500 people. The Ladies Aid served dinner on that occasion and cleared approximately $50. The offering at the sale consisted chiefly of live stock and the clerk's book showed over $4,000 worth of stuff was disposed of. Jas. Maddox, speaking of the sale, said their advertising in the Courier brought results beyond his expectation.

Fashion Hints
from the Bischoff
Style Show

The new tailored suits are studies in simplicity

To be really smart, your tailored suit this year must be equisitely simple.

Few trimmings are used because the materials themselves are trimming enough. And because such little trimming is used is all the more reason why you should have the right bit of color, the right button for your suit.

Bischoff tailored suits are marvels of style, and are ever so pretty because they are ever so simple.

He has made the choosing of materials an art. He picks them as you would a piece of goods for a "particular" gown—for fashion and service.

Every yard of the cloth is thoroughly shrunk. Every operation in the making is performed by experts who have been at that particular work for years. This means that your Bischoff coat or suit will hold its style and shape till the fabric wears out.

Every garment is fitted on live models—this is why you can be so easily fitted in a Bischoff coat or suit.

Don't put off seeing them a day longer. There is sure to be one garment among them that was made just for you.

STRONGEST FORTRESS FALL GERMANS TAKE ANTWERP.

After continued fighting between the Allies and Germans for several weeks, the first victory of any importance has been in favor of the Germans, when they reduced the fort at Antwerp, a city of 300,000, in Belgium. The capture of Antwerp is significant inasmuch as it was the strongest fortress in Europe.

The first shot was fired Sept. 28. On Oct. 1 the first forts were taken by assault. The river Nethie was crossed Oct. 6 and 7. On the 7th Antwerp was notified that a bombardment was imminent, and this was begun at 12:30 a.m., Oct. 8. Simultaneously an attack was made on the inner forts.

On Oct. 9 two of the inner forts were taken. At 2:30 p.m., Antwerp was occupied by German infantry without opposition. However, the effect of the German artillery, infantry and marine division in the first attack was such that resistance was futile.

A large quantity of supplies was taken by the Germans.

In official circles it is recognized that the fall of Antwerp may prolong the war. The Germans are certain to rebuild the forts, which will become a base for Zeppelin attacks against the British coast.

In the form of a dairy, the story of the siege of Antwerp and the German plan of attack are given in the following dispatch:

"Saturday, Sept. 26.—Belgians retired from positions east, south and west of Mailnes to the line of outer forts.

"Sept. 27.—Bombardment of Forts de Waelhem, de Wavre St. Catherine and others on southern line by 11-inch howitzers.

"Sept. 29.—Magazine of Fort Waelhem blown up by shell fire. Fort de Wavre St. Catherine put out of action; forts at Lierre bombarded.

"Sept. 30.—Forts de Waelhem and Wavre St. Catherine completely destroyed. Water works behind Forts de Waelhem blown up. Belgian infantry continued to hold their entrenchment in the face of a veritable hell of shell fire. The water supply in Antwerp is greatly curtailed.

"Oct. 1.—Lierre forts destroyed. German infantry attacks were repulsed with heavy losses.

"Oct. 2.—There was a heavy bombardment of the Belgian trenches. The Belgians retired at night in good order and lined the River Nethie. The Germans began to occupy the outer ring of forts. A German aeroplane flew over the city and dropped pamphlets urging the inhabitants to surrender and save themselves suffering.

"Oct. 3.—Arrival of fresh British troops who relieve fatigued Belgians on the southeastern section. Here the Germans concentrate their attack, which is now almost exclusively an artillery attack.

"Oct. 4.—Quiet until evening when the Germans began a furious bombardment of the Lierre and the river bank trenches.

"Oct. 5.—The Germans cross the river and occupy Lierre and Duffel. The main Belgian army began retirement westward.

"Oct. 6.—Departure of King Albert, the government and the foreign ministers. Heavy bombardment of the allied position. The allied troops retired during the night on second line of forts.

"Oct. 7.—Gov. Gen. de Guise announces that a bombardment of the city is imminent. The Germans emplace batteries for their purpose, and at midnight a heavy bombardment begins.

"Oct. 8.—Exodus of the population. The bombardment of the town is continued with violence. The petrol tanks are ablaze. Berchem, a southern suburb, is in flames, as also many houses in that city. The defending troops on the southwest section are offering violent resistance. It is decided to evacuate the city, and the British and Belgian forces leave during the night.

"Oct. 9.—The fall and occupation of Antwerp.

"It will thus be seen that the Germans took a fortnight to drive their wedge into the southeastern section of the defenses, and this speaks volumes for the stubbornness of the defense. British marines were hurried across last Sunday and conveyed to Antwerp with all speed. With them were some bluejackets. They came without overcoats or kits, but cheerfully endured the cold and rain as well as the pul-

22,000 prisoners and have imposed a $100,000,000 war indemnity on Antwerp."

OBITUARY.

The death angel visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Underwood at 8 o'clock Oct. 8, and claimed for its victim their sweet little girl, Little Rosine. Her stay on earth was but a short time but loved by all who knew her. She was two years, eight months and six days old when she died. She was sick nine days with fever. All that loving hands could do could not stay the hands of death. God knew best. But we have the blessed assurance that little Rosine is at rest for Jesus said, "Suffer little children to come unto me for of such is the kingdom of heaven." Tis so hard for father and mother to give their sweet little darling up for she was always ready to meet papa and mamma with a smile. Their home is so still and lonely and her chair is vacant. But God saw fit in His wisdom to take her from them. May the Lord's richest blessings rest upon the father and mother that they may be prepared to meet their sweet child in the sweet bye and bye is my prayer.

Her body was laid to rest in the Poplar Grove cemetery, funeral services conducted by Rev. King.

Death comes so unexpected when life seems bright and gay. It creeps in before we know it and takes our dear ones away.

Sleep on dear little Rosine.

And take thy rest.

God called thee home.

He thought it best.

Now the place is hushed.

And still there's a face that'll

How To Give Quinine To Children.

FEBRILINE is the trade-mark name given to an impure Quinine. It is a tasteless syrup, pleasant to take, and does not disagree with children. Children take it and never know it is Quinine. Also especially adapted to adults who cannot take ordinary Quinine. Does not nauseate nor cause nervousness nor ringing in the head. Try it the next time you need Quinine for any purpose. Ask for 2-ounce original package. The name FEBRILINE is blown in bottle. 25 cents.

MISS HIGGINS MARRIED.

Mrs. W. H. How to Treat Croup Externally

Rub Vick's "Vap-O-Rub" Croup and Pneumonia Salve well over the throat and chest for a few minutes and then cover with a warm flannel cloth. Leave the covering loose around the neck so that the vapors inhaled may loosen the choking phlegm and open the air passages. Usually one treatment relieves in fifteen minutes. One application at bed-time will prevent a night attack. Vick's will be found better than internal medicines for all inflammation of the air passages from head colds and catarrh down to bronchitis and incipient pneumonia. Three sizes—25c, 50c, and $1.00.

Miss Nina Mai Walker, of Crutefield, and Robert McClain of Nashville, were quietly married at 2 o'clock on Sunday, Oct. 4, in the presence of a few of their friends of Fulton, at the home of Rev. D. W. Folks, a Presbyterian clergyman, of Nashville. J. T. South, of Nashville, and Miss Howell, of Crutefield, accompanied the bride and groom to Rev. Folks' home. The bride was dressed in a dark blue traveling suit and wore a jaunty little traveling hat of black. Miss Walker is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Walker and is a very charming young lady.

Mr. McClain is a promising young man. He is employed by the N. C. & St. L. Ry. as flagman and is of a prominent and respected family of Nashville. Mr. McClain met Miss Walker at Hickman in February 1912 while the latter was visiting friends. The groom is 24 years old. Mr. and Mrs. R. B. McClain are going to visit Savannah and Atlanta, Georgia, and other cities in the south on their honeymoon trip. The young couple left immediately after the marriage on number 5 for Nashville where there was an elegant wedding supper prepared at the home of the groom's sister. After Nov. 1 they will be at home at Nashville.

TO MAKE TEST CASE.

Test of the efficacy of the act of 1914 declaring highways connecting county seats public works to authorize the employment of convicts on highways construction in Kentucky, will be made in a short time, as soon as an order of the Lawrence county court demanding the services of twenty convicts from the state reformatory, is served on Warden Wells. It is understood he will decline to surrender custody of the men on the ground that the Constitution requires the employment of convicts inside the prison walls. If he does a suit will follow.

CHAPTER V.

The Hunted Man.

That day was hot and windless with an unclouded sky—a day of brass and burning.

Long before any sound audible to human ears disturbed the noonday hush, a bobcat sunning on a log in a glade to which no trail led, pricked ears, rose, glanced over shoulder with a snarl and—of a sudden was no more there.

Perhaps two minutes later a succession of remote crashings began to be heard, a cumulative volume of sounds made by some heavy body forcing by main strength through the underbrush, and ceased only when a man broke into the clearing, pulled up, stood for an instant swaying, then reeled to a seat on the log, pillow his head on arms folded across his knees and shuddered uncontrollably in all his limbs.

He was a young man who had been and would again be very personable. Just now he wore the look of one hounded by furies. His face was crimson with congested blood and streaked with sweat and grime; bluish veins throbbed in high relief upon his temples; his lips were cracked and swollen, his eyes haggard, his hands torn and bleeding. His shirt and trousers and "cruisers" were wrecks, the latter scorched, charred, and broken in a dozen places. Woods equipment he had none beyond a hunting knife belt ed at the small of his back. All else had been either consumed in the forest fire or stolen by his Indian guide—who had subsequently died while attempting to murder his employer.

Since that event, the man had succeeded in losing himself completely. In seeking shelter from the thunder-storm, he had lost touch with his only known and none too clearly located landmarks. Then, after a night passed without a fire in the lee of a ragged bluff, he had waked to discover the sun rising in the west and the rest of the universe sympathetically upside-down; and aimlessly ever since he had stumbled and blundered in the maze of those grimly reticent fastnesses, for the last few hours haunted by a fear of failing reason—possessed by a notion that he was dogged by furtive enemies—and within the last hour the puppet of blind, witless panic.

But even as he strove to calm himself and rest, the feeling that something was peering at him from behind a mask of undergrowth grew intolerably acute.

At length he jumped up, glared wildly at the spot where that something no longer was, flung himself frantically through the brush in pursuit of it, and—found nothing.

With a great effort he pulled himself together, clamped his teeth upon the promise not again to give way to hallucinations, and turned back to the clearing.

There, upon the log on which he had rested, he found—but refused to believe he saw—a playing card, a trey of hearts, face up in the sun-shade.

With a gesture of horror, Alan Law fled the place.

While the sounds of his flight were still loud, a grinning half-breed guide stole like a shadow to the log, laughed derisively after the fugitive, picked up and pocketed the card, and set out in tireless, cat-footed pursuit.

An hour later, topping a ridge of rising ground, Alan caught from the hollow on its farther side the music of rushing waters. Tortured by thirst, he began at once to descend in reckless haste.

What was at first a gentle slope covered with waist-deep brush and carpeted with leaf-mold, grew swiftly more declivitous, a mossy hillside, as steep as a roof, bare of underbrush, and sparsely sown with small cedars through whose ranks cool blue water twinkled far below.

The shelving moss-beds afforded treacherous footing; Alan was glad now and then of the support of a cedar, but these grew ever smaller, and more widely spaced and were not always convenient to his hand. He came abruptly and at headlong pace within sight of the eaves of a cliff—and precisely then the hillside seemed to slip from under him.

His heels flourished in the air, his back thumped a bed of pebbles thinly overgrown with moss. The stones gave, the moss-skin broke, he began to slide—grasped at random a youngish cedar which stayed him imperceptibly, coming away with all its puny roots—caught at another, no more substantial—and amid a shower of loose stone shot out over the edge and down a drop of more than thirty feet.

He was instantaneously aware of the sun, a molten ball wheeling madly in the cup of the turquoise sky. Then dark waters closed over him.

He came up struggling and gasping, and struck out for something dark that rode the waters near at hand—something vaguely resembling a canoe.

But his strength was largely spent, his breath had been driven out of him by the force of the fall, and he had swallowed much water—while the field of his consciousness was stricken with confusion.

Within a stroke of an outstretched paddle, he flung up a hand and went down again.

Instantly one occupant of the canoe, a young and very beautiful woman in a man's hunting clothes, spoke a sharp word of command and, as her guide steadied the vessel with his paddle, rose in her place so surely that she scarcely disturbed the nice balance of the little craft, and curved her lithe body over the bow, head foremost into the pool.

• • • • •

Mr. Law had, in point of fact, endured more than he knew; more than even a weathered woodsman could have borne without suffering. Forty-eight hours of such heavy woods-walking as he had put in to escape the forest fire, would have served to prostrate almost any man; add to this (ignoring a dozen other mental, nervous and physical strains) merely the fact that he had been half-drowned.

He experienced a little fever, a little delirium, then blank slumbers of exhaustion.

He awoke in dark of night, wholly unaware that thirty-six hours had passed since his fall. This last, however, and events that had gone before, he recalled with tolerable clearness—allowing for the sluggishness of a drowsy mind. Other memories, more vague, of gentle ministering hands, of a face by turns an angel's, a flower's, a fiend's, and a dear woman's, troubled him even less materially. He was already sane enough to allow he had probably been a bit out of his head, and since it seemed he had been saved and cared for, he found no reason to quarrel with present circumstances.

Still, he would have been grateful for some explanation of certain phenomena which still haunted him—such as a faint, elusive scent of roses with a vague but importunate sense of a woman's presence in that darkened room—things manifestly absurd.

With some difficulty, from a dry throat, he spoke, or rather whispered: "Water!"

In response he heard someone move over a creaking floor. A sulphur match spluttered infamously. A candle caught fire, silhouetting—illusion, of course!—the figure of a woman in hunting shirt and skirt. Water splashed noisily. Alan became aware of someone who stood at his side, one hand offering a glass to his lips, the other gently raising his head that he might drink with ease.

Draining the glass, he breathed his thanks and sank back, retaining his grasp on the wrist of that unreal hand. It suffered him without resistance. The hallucination even went so far as to say, in a woman's soft accents:

"You are better, Alan?"

He sighed incredulously: "Rose!"

The voice responded "Yes!" Then the perfume of roses grew still more strong, seeming to fan his cheek like a woman's warm breath. And a miracle came to pass; for Mr. Law, who realized poignantly that all this was sheer, downright nonsense, distinctly felt lips like velvet caress his forehead.

He closed his eyes, tightened his grasp on that hand of phantasy, and muttered rather inarticulately.

The voice asked: "What is it, dear?"

He responded: "Delirium . . . But I like it . . . Let me rave!"

Then again he slept.

CHAPTER VI.

Disclosures.

In a little corner office, soberly furnished, on the topmost floor of one of lower Manhattan's loftiest office-towers, a little mouse-brown man sat over a big mahogany desk; a little man of big affairs, sole steward of one of America's most formidable fortunes.

Precisely at eleven minutes past noon (or at the identical instant chosen by Alan Law to catapult over the edge of a cliff in northern Maine) the muted signal of the little man's desk telephone clicked and, eagerly lifting receiver to ear, he nodded with a smile and said in accents of some relief: "Ask her to come in at once, please."

Jumping up, he placed a chair in intimate juxtaposition with his own; and the door opened, and a young woman entered.

The mouse-brown man bowed. "Miss Rose Trine?" he murmured with a great deal of deference.

The young woman returned his bow with a show of perplexity: "Mr. Digby?"

"You are kind to come in response to my—ah—unconventional invitation," said the little man. "Won't you—ah—sit down?"

She said, "Thank you," gravely, and took the chair he indicated. And Mr. Digby, with an admiration he made no effort to conceal, examined the fair face turned so candidly to him.

"It is quite comprehensible," he said diffidently—"if you will permit me to say so—now that one sees you, Miss Trine, it is quite comprehensible why my employer—ah—feels toward you as he does."

The girl flushed. "Mr. Law has told you?"

"I have the honor to be his nearest friend, this side the water, as well as his man of business."

He paused with an embarrassed gesture. "So I have ventured to request this—ah—surprised appointment in order to—ah—take the further liberty of asking whether you have recently sent Alan a message?"

Her look of surprise was answer enough, but she confirmed it with vigorous denial: "I have not communicated with Mr. Law in more than a year!"

"Precisely as I thought," Mr. Digby nodded. "None the less, Mr. Law not long since received what purported to be a message from you; in fact—a rose." And as Miss Trine sat forward with a start of dismay, he added: "I have the information over Mr. Law's signature—a letter received ten days ago—from Quebec."

"Alan in America!" the girl cried in undisguised distress.

"He came in response to—ah—the message of the rose."

"But I did not send it!"

"I felt sure of that, because," said Mr. Digby, watching her narrowly—"because of something that accompanied the rose, a symbol of another significance altogether—a playing card, a troy of hearts."

Her eyes were blank. He pursued with openly sincere reluctance: "I must tell you, I see, that a troy of hearts invariably foresignaled an attempt by your father on the life of Alan's father."

With a stricken cry the girl crunched

TREY OF HEARTS.

hand like the claw of a bird of prey, moved toward a row of buttons sunk in the writing-bed of his desk.

"I warn you I have ways to make you speak—"

With a quick movement the girl bent over and prisoned the bony wrist in her strong fingers. With her other hand, at the same time, she whipped open an upper drawer of the desk and took from it a revolver which she placed at a safe distance.

"To the contrary," she said quietly, "you will remember that the time has passed when you could have me punished for disobedience. You will call nobody; if interrupted, I shan't hesitate to defend myself. And now"—laying hold of the back of his chair, she moved it some distance from the desk—"you may as well be quiet while I find for myself what I wish to know."

For a moment he watched in silence as she bent over the desk, rummaging its drawers. Then with an infuriated gesture of his left hand, he began to curse her.

She shuddered a little as the black oaths blistered his thin old lips, dedicating her and all she loved to sin, infamy and sorrow; but nothing could stay her in her purpose. He was breathless and exhausted when she straightened up with an exclamation of satisfaction, studied intently for a moment a sheaf of papers, and thrust them hastily into her hand-bag, together with the revolver.

Then touching the push-button which released a secret and little-used door, without a backward glance she slipped from the room and, closing the door securely, within another minute had made her way unseen from the house.

CHAPTER VIII.

Broad daylight, the top of a morning as rare as ever broke upon the north country: Alan Law opening bewildered eyes to realize the substance of a dream come true.

True it proved itself, at least, in part. He lay between blankets upon a couch of balsam fans, in a corner of somebody's camp—a log structure, weather-proof, rudely but adequately furnished. His clothing, rough-dried but neatly mended, lay upon a chair at his side.

He rose and dressed in haste, at once exulting in his sense of complete rest and renewed well-being, a prey to hints of an extraordinary appetite, and provoked by signs that seemed to bear out the wildest flights of his delirious fancies.

There were apparently indisputable evidences of a woman's recent presence in the camp: blankets neatly folded upon a second bed of aromatic balsam in the farther corner; an effect of orderliness not common with guides; a pair of dainty buckskin gauntlets depending from a nail in the wall; and—he stood staring wistfully at it for more than a minute—in an old preserve jar on the table, a single rose, warm and red, dew upon its petals!

There was also fire in the cook stove, with a plentiful display of things to cook; but despite his hunger Alan didn't stop for that, but rushed to the door and threw it open and himself out into the sunshine, only to pause, dashed, chagrined, mystified.

There was no other living thing in sight but a loon that sported far up the river and saluted him with a shriek of mocking laughter.

The place was a cleft in the hills, a table of level land some few acres in area, bounded on one hand, beneath the cliff from which he had dropped, by a rushing river fat with recent rains; on the other by a second cliff of equal height. Upstream the water curved round the shoulder of a towering hill, downstream the cliffs closed upon it until it roared through a narrow gorge.

Near the camp, upon a strip of shelving beach that bordered the river where it widened into a deep, dark pool, two canoes were drawn up, bottoms to the sun. Dense thickets of pines, oaks, and balsams hedged in the clearing.

He was, it seemed, to be left severely to himself, that day; when he had cooked and made way with an enormous breakfast, Alan found nothing better to do till time for luncheon than to explore this pocket domain. He feasted famously again at noon; while away several hours vainly whipping the pools with rod and tackle found in the camp, for trout that he really didn't hope would rise beneath that blazing sun; and toward three o'clock lounged back to his aromatic couch for a nap.

The westering sun had thrown a deep, cool shadow across the cove when he was awakened by importunate hands and a voice of magic.

Rose Trine was kneeling beside him, clutching his shoulders, calling on him by name—distracted by an inexplicable anxiety.

He wasted no time discriminating between dream and reality, but gathered both into his arms. And for a moment she rested there unresisting, sobbing quietly.

"What is it? What is it, dearest?" he questioned, kissing her tears away.

"To find you all right . . . I was so afraid!" she cried brokenly.

"Of what? Wasn't I all right when you left me here this morning?"

She disengaged with an effort, rose, and looked down strangely at him.

"I did not leave you here this morning, Alan. I wasn't here—"

That brought him to his own feet in a jiffy. "You were not!" he stammered. "Then who?"

"Judith," she stated with conviction.

"Impossible! You don't understand."

The girl shook her head. "Yet I know: Judith was here until this morning. I tell you I know—I saw her only a few hours ago. She passed us in a canoe with one of her guides, while we watched in hiding on the banks. Not that alone, but another of her guides told mine she was here with you. She had sent him to South Portage for quinine. He stopped there to get drunk—and that's how my guide managed to worm the information from him."

Alan passed a hand across his eyes. "I don't understand," he said dully. "It doesn't seem possible she could."

A shot interrupted him, the report of a rifle from a considerable distance upstream, echoed and re-echoed by the cliffs. And at this clutching frantically at his arm, the girl drew him through the door and down toward the river.

"Oh, come, come!" she cried wildly. "There's no time!"

"But, why? What was that?"

"Judith is returning. I left my guide up the trail to signal us. Don't you know what it means if we don't manage to escape before she gets here?"

"But how?"

"According to the guide the river's the only way other than the trail."

"The current is too strong. They could follow—pot us at leisure from the banks."

"But downstream—the current with us—"

"Those rapids?"

"We must shoot them!"

"Can it be done?"

"It must be!"

Two more shots put a period to his doubts and drove it home. He offered no further objection, but turned at once to launch one of the canoes.

As soon as it was in the water, Rose took her place in the bow, paddle in hand, and Alan was about to step in astern when a fourth shot sounded and a bullet kicked up turf within a dozen feet. A glance discovered two figures debouching into the clearing. He dropped into place and, planting paddle in shallows, sent the canoe well out with a vigorous thrust.

Two strokes took it to the middle of the pool where immediately the current caught the little craft in its urgent grasp and sped it smoothly through more narrow and higher banks. A moment more and the mouth of the gorge was yawning behind.

With the clean balance of an experienced canoe man, Alan rose to his feet for an instantaneous reconnaissance both forward and astern. He looked back first, and groaned in his heart to see the sharp prow of the second canoe glide out from the banks. He looked ahead and groaned aloud. The rapids were a wilderness of shouting waters, white and green, worse than anything he had anticipated or ever dreamed of.

But there was now no escaping that ordeal. The canoe was already spinning between walls where the water ran deep and fast with a glassy surface.

The next instant it was in the jaws; and the man settled down to work with grim determination, pitting courage and strength and experience against the ravening waters that tore at the canoe on every hand, whose mad clamor beat back and forth between the walls of the gorge like vast bellows of infernal mirth.

He fought like one possessed. There was never an instant's grace for judgment or execution; the one must be synchronous with the other, both instantaneous, or else—destruction.

The canoe wove this way and that like an insane shuttle threading some satanic loom. Now it hesitated, nudging a gigantic boulder over which the water wove a pale green and glistening hood, now in the space of a heartbeat it shot forward twice its length through a sea of creaming waves, now plunged wildly toward what promised instant annihilation and cheated that only by the timely plunge of a paddle, guided by luck or instinct or both.

The one ray of hope in Alan's mind, when he surveyed before committing himself and the woman he loved to that hideous gauntlet, sprang from the fact that, however rough, the rapids were short. Now, when he had been in their grasp a minute, he seemed to have been there hours.

His labors were tremendous, unbelievable, inspired. In the end they were all but successful. The goal of safety was within thirty seconds' more of quick, hard work, when Alan's paddle broke and the canoe swung broadside to a boulder, turned turtle and precipitated both headlong into that savage welter.

As the next few minutes passed he was fighting like a mad thing against overwhelming odds. Then, of a sudden, he found himself rejected, spewed forth from the cataract and swimming mechanically in the smooth water of a wide pool beyond the lowermost eddy, the canoe floating bottom up near by, and Rose supporting herself with one hand on it.

Her eyes met his, clear with the sanity of her adorable courage.

He floundered to her side, panted instructions to transfer her hand to his shoulder, and struck out for the nearer shore.

Both found footing at the same time and waded out, to collapse, exhausted, against the bank.

Then, with a sickening qualm, Alan remembered the pursuit. He rose and looked up the rapid just in time to view the last swift quarter of the canoe's descent: Judith in the bow, motionless, a rifle across her knees, in the stern an Indian guide kneeling and fighting the waters with scarcely perceptible effort in contrast with Alan's supreme struggles.

Like a living thing the canoe seemed to gather itself together, to poise, to leap with all its strength; it hurried the eddy in a bound, took the still water with a mighty splash, and shot downstream at diminished speed, the Indian furiously backing water.

As though that had been the one moment she had lived for, Judith lifted her rifle and brought it to bear upon her sister.

With a cry of horror, Alan flung himself before Rose, a living shield, anticipating nothing but immediate death. This was not accorded him. For a breathless instant the woman in the canoe stared along the sights, then lowered her weapon and, turning, spoke indistinguishably to the guide, who instantly began to ply a brisk paddle.

They Found a Footing.

The canoe sped on, vanished swiftly round a bend.

Try This for your Cough.

Thousands of people keep coughing because unable to get the right remedy. Coughs are caused by Inflammation of the Throat and Bronchial Tubes. What you need is to soothe this inflammation. Take Dr. King's New Discovery, it penetrates the delicate mucous lining, raises the Phlegm and quickly relieves the congested membranes. Get a 50c bottle from your druggist. "Dr. King's New Discovery quickly and completely stopped my cough" writes J. R. Watts, Floydale, Texas. Money back if not satisfied, but it nearly always helps.

For Tired Feet.

Nothing helps tired feet more than regular rubbing with vaseline or some other pure fat. Mutton tallow is very good and agrees with every skin. Soldiers grease their feet every night when on the march. An ounce of flexible collodion and 30 grains of salicylic acid is an effectual corn cure, but must not be allowed to touch the healthy flesh.

Only One "BROMO QUININE".

To get the genuine, call for full name. LAXATIVE BROMO QUININE. Look for signature of E. W. GROVE. Cures a Cold in One Day. Stops cough and headache, and works off cold. 25c.

Odious, Ain't It?

Bang—The way these colleges scatter around their degree is absolutely nauseating. Every Tom, Dick and Harry with a little cheap notoriety can figure on getting one. The whole system is absolutely indefensible. Don't you think so? Bang—Yes. I didn't get one, either.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Cures Old Sores, Other Remedies Won't Cure. The worst cases, no matter of how long standing, are cured by the wonderful, old reliable Dr. Porter's Antiseptic Healing Oil. It relieves Pain and Heals at the same time. 25c, 50c, $1.00.

Worth Trying.

Wallpapers.

Paper for screens and partitions of rooms was common in China as early as the fourth century. In the sixteenth century the use of wallpaper became fashionable in Holland, and soon afterwards it was commonly seen in English houses. Originally Chinese papers were printed from blocks, handpainted, or stamped, the designs being exquisite. Modern printing and stamping machines made the manufacture of continuous rolls of wallpaper possible.

CIRCUIT COURT PROCEEDINGS.

Following is summary of proceeding of the regular September term of Fulton Circuit Court, which adjourned here Saturday.

Commonwealth Cases.

Hickman, first week:
Frank Wallace, appeal from lower court, violating local option law, not guilty.

Jim Ammons, breach of the peace, filed away.

T. A. Ledford, J. W. Naylor and John M. Thompson, were appointed jury commissioners for the year 1915.

Hite Flowers, murder, found guilty of voluntary manslaughter.

Fate Simmons, incest, bond forfeited.

Bob Branham, detaining woman against her will, dismissed for want of proof.

Fulton, second week:
Joe Harvey, for use of City of Fulton, violating local option law, fined $80.

H. D. Carlton, suffering gaming on premises, filed away.

Son Neely, detaining woman, etc., found guilty and sentenced 2 to 7 years in penitentiary.

Ed Johnson, shooting on public highway, not guilty.

R. M. Walsh, permitting minor to play pool, not guilty.

Marvin DeMyer, permitting minor to play pool, dismissed.

Guy Bennett, violating local option law, fined $25 each in three cases and one filed away.

E. J. Stahr, F. B. Atteberry, et al, Fiscal Court, indicted for common nuisance, hung jury.

They were indicted at Fulton on the May term of court for allowing a mud hole in State Line street in Fulton. The City of Fulton claims that their corporation line only runs to the street, but evidence was introduced showing that the officers of that city had arrested people on the other side of the street. It was also shown that a small strip of the same street was inside city limits, in other words leaving a strip of State Line street as outside the city limits, although surrounded on three sides by property inside the limits, and bounded on the other side by the Tennessee line. County Attorney Roney intends appealing the case. The City of Fulton was indicted at the same time, but a continuance was granted when the case was called at this term of court.

Dan Higgs, violating local option law, dismissed.

Alvin Weatherspoon, carrying concealed deadly weapon, fined $25 and ten days in jail.

Pete Patterson, violating local option law, not guilty.

Dan Morris, incest, acquitted.

Carl Hodges, carrying concealed deadly weapon, fined $25 and ten days in jail.

Mrs. R. F. Clark, assault and battery, continued.

Mrs. Fannie Allen, breach of the peace, filed away.

Omar Brown and Ed Brown, robbery, continued.

Ed Barnett, breaking into smokehouse, not guilty.

NEGRO HELD CHARGED WITH SWIPING JUMPER.

J. T. Wright, a 20 year old negro, furnished some excitement here Saturday, when he, followed by Terrill Sullivan, exceeded the speed limit on Clinton street. Mr. Sullivan, of Sullivan Bros. noticed the negro leaving his store wearing a new jumper, which he had failed to pay for. Sullivan told the boy to stop and the boy evidently misunderstood him, as he took to his heels with surprising speed, but Sullivan was also some sprinter and succeeded in overtaking him at the rear of Smith & Amberg's store. Judge Amberg turned Wright over to the county authorities on charge of petit larceny.

MOTHER SUPERIOR ROSARY HILL HOME

Tells How Vinol Restores Strength and Vitality to the Weak, Worn-Out Ones in Her Charge.

Rosary Hill Home, Hawthorne, N.Y.—"I have been at work among the sick and poor for nearly eighteen years, and whenever I have used Vinol for rundown, weak or emaciated patients, they have been visibly benefited by it. One patient, a young woman, was so weak and ill she could hardly creep to my door for aid and was leaning on a friend's arm. I supplied Vinol to her liberally and in a month when she returned to thank me I hardly recognized her. She was strong, her color charming and her cheeks rounded out. These words are uttered from my heart, in order that more people may know about Vinol, as there is nothing makes me happier in the world than to relieve the sick."

GRAND JURY URGES
LAW ENFORCEMENT.

To the Honorable Judge R. B. Flatt and associate officers of the Fulton Circuit Court:

We, the undersigned members of the September 1914 term of the grand jury, having completed the work assigned us, do most earnestly and respectfully desire to report that through our investigations we find that the greatest majority of crimes committed, shooting, scrapes, violations of the law of all kinds, etc., are traceable to the sale and use of vicious, spirituous or malt liquor of some description. This community and county are at present cursed by the sale of decoctions known as cider, slick top, amber head, junk, etc., and are directly responsible as above stated for a majority of the crimes committed. We have been appealed to by people who drink this stuff and those who do not use it, people who are reputable and law abiding citizens, to try and put a stop to the sale of this "dope" in our community, that they considered that the traffic in this stuff was a nuisance, that it is the most demoralizing affairs with which we were ever confronted, and we heartily agree with them in their opinions.

Now we wish to respectfully state that we have labored faithfully in the discharge of our duty, have fairly and impartially found true bills in every case where we believed the evidence justified, and not otherwise. We have returned a number of indictments, several against the same parties, mostly for the illegal sale of vicious, malt or spirituous liquors, or "dope." And we most respectfully ask that a strong prosecution be made by you in each and every case upon the indictments returned by us, that no compromises be made and that no indictments be filed away, or cases continued if possible, believing, as we do, that this will be the only means of driving this curse from our midst. And furthermore we request that a copy of this report be furnished to the Hickman Courier by the Circuit Clerk for publication.

Most respectfully submitted,
H. C. Heba, foreman grand jury.

ONLY THIRTEEN WET.

COMET NOW VISIBLE.

Sixty days hence, as a consequence of the prohibition elections held in fifteen counties during September, the sale of liquor will be licensed in only thirteen of Kentucky's 120 counties. The wet places are in Jefferson, Kenton, Campbell, Fayette, Anderson, Nelson, Boyd, Meade, Daviess, Christian, Henderson and McCracken counties. The total population of the state is, according to the 1910 census, 2,289,905, and of this 1,741,652 will in sixty days be living in dry territory, leaving 648,253 in the wet territory. This, it is said, is the best time to observe the comet.

The population of the nine counties out of which all saloons were voted out during September is 447,902, while the population of the six counties voting to retain saloons in their principal cities is 202,142. It is not likely that anything short of state-wide prohibition will change the situation in the thirteen wet counties.

WHEN A LIE IS NOT A LIE.

When the hired girl says her mistress is not at home, while said mistress is upstairs with a novel; when your lady friend says she is not a bit hungry and forthwith consumes $6 worth of food and drink; when you say to a panhandling friend, "sorry, old top, but I haven't a cent about me," and there is a large yellow $20 bill in your vest pocket. These are not lies; they are efforts to spare people's feelings; they are triumphs of altruism over the brutality of conscience.—Ex.

YOUNG DIETZEL TAKEN TO NASHVILLE PRISON.

"My conviction was the result of a frame-up," declared Frank Dietzel, when seen in his cell in the Davidson county jail, Friday.

Dietzel, 22, under sentence of death for the alleged murder of George Weinman, was removed there from Union City, where the Obion county jail was held by Judge Joseph E. Jones to be insecure. For fear Dietzel would escape he was ordered transferred to the capital by Judge Jones.

A suit case full of natty and stylish clothing reached Dietzel from his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Dietzel, Sr., wealthy citizens of Union City. The youth is as cheerful as though he were not in the shadow of the electric chair.

Dietzel declared he was confident that when the supreme court views his case the evidence which brought about his conviction, would fall to pieces and that he would stand acquitted.

If Dietzel feels any apprehension he does not show it. His brother, Herman Dietzel, Jr., who accompanied the condemned lad from Union City, left a check for $500 with the jailer of the Davidson county prison with instructions to gratify every wish of the prisoner. If more funds are needed, the brother said, they would be provided instantly.

Mrs. Jay McGee, of Stephenville, Texas, writes: "For nine (9) years, I suffered with womanly trouble. I had terrible headaches, and pains in my back, etc. It seemed as if I would die, I suffered so. At last, I decided to try Cardui, the woman's tonic, and it helped me right away. The full treatment not only helped me, but it cured me."

Cardui
The Woman's Tonic

Cardui helps women in time of greatest need, because it contains ingredients which act specifically, yet gently, on the weakened womanly organs. So, if you feel discouraged, blue, out-of-sorts, unable to do your household work, on account of your condition, stop worrying and give Cardui a trial. It has helped thousands of women,—why not you? Try Cardui.

Sick Women Attention

Is it possible there is a woman in this country who continues to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial after all the evidence that is continually being published, which proves beyond contradiction that this grand old medicine has relieved more suffering among women than any other one medicine in the world?

We have published in the newspapers of the United States more genuine testimonial letters than have ever been published in the interest of any other medicine for women—and every year we publish many new testimonials, all genuine and true. Here are three never before published:

From Mrs. S. T. Richmond, Providence, R. I.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—"For the benefit of women who suffer as I have done I wish to state what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I did some heavy lifting and the doctor said it caused a displacement. I have always been weak and I overworked after my baby was born and inflammation set in, then nervous prostration, from which I did not recover until I had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. The Compound is my best friend and when I hear of a woman with troubles like mine I try to induce her to take your medicine."—Mrs. S. T. RICHMOND, 199 Waldo Street, Providence, R. I.

A Minister's Wife Writes:

CLOQUET, MINN.—"I have suffered very much with irregularities, pain and inflammation, but your wonderful medicine, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, has made me well and I can recommend the same to all that are troubled with these complaints."—Mrs. JENNIE AKERMAN, c/o Rev. K. AKERMAN, Cloquet, Minnesota.

From Mrs. J. D. Murdoch, Quincy, Mass.

SOUTH QUINCY, MASS.—"The doctor said that I had organic trouble and he doctored me for a long time and I did not get any relief. I saw Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised and I tried it and found relief before I had finished the first bottle. I continued taking it all through middle life and am now a strong, healthy woman and earn my own living."—Mrs. JANE D. MURDOCH, 25 Gordon St., South Quincy, Mass.

WARNING NATIONS EXPLAIN WHY THEY FIGHT.

The British and German papers, giving the diplomatic correspondence that preceded the war, have been made public. From these, according to the New York Independent's compilation, it appears that the various nations involved went to war for the following reasons (accepting each nation's statement of its own case):

Austria—Because Servia would not permit the Austrian officials to take part in the investigations in Servia into the responsibility of Servians for the murder of the Austrian Crown Prince and Princess.

Servia—Because on her refusal to accede to this demand of Austria, on the ground that she would be sacrificing her own sovereignty, and in spite of her proposal to leave the matter to arbitration, Austria attacked her.

Russia—Because Austria was making war on Servia.

Germany—Because Russia declined to cease mobilizing her army—a mobilization which Germany believed was directed at herself as well as her ally, Austria.

France—Because her ally, Russia, was attacked by Germany.

Belgium—Because her neutral territory, whose neutrality was guaranteed by a treaty signed by Germany, was invaded by German arms.

England—Because Germany has violated the treaty guaranteeing the neutrality of Belgium of which both Germany and England were signers.

Japan—Because her treaty with England bound her to join with England when the peace in the Far East was threatened.

The impartial historian may some day know how to apportion the final responsibility for the great war among the nations that enter it. We now merely report what each nation has to say for itself.

COMFORTING WORDS.

Many a Hickman Household Will Find Them So.

To have the pains and aches of a bad back removed—to be entirely free from annoying, dangerous urinary disorders, is enough to make any kidney sufferer grateful. The following advice of one who has suffered will prove comforting words to hundreds of Hickman readers.

W. A. Smith, Hickman, Ky., says: "I can highly recommend Doan's Kidney Pills, as I have used them for kidney trouble and have always been greatly benefited. I had pains across the small of my back and in my sides. My kidneys and bladder were weak, obliging me to get up at night. Two boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills cured me. Now I seldom have need of a kidney remedy."

Price 50c at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Smith recommends. Foster-Milburn Co., Prop., Buffalo, N. Y.

The stage of the Ohio river at Paducah is the lowest on record, with indication that it will go lower. The gauge reached 0.6 of a foot Friday. According to the records the previous lowest stage was 0.7, which was in 1895, and the river remained at this mark from Oct. 31 to Nov. 8. Navigation has been suspended for several days with the exception of local packets which have short runs. The river is full of sandbars and is very dangerous for steamers. The gasoline boats that have succeeded local packets often scrape the bottom of the river.

The Fulton Leader says: Chalmers Valentine, Harry Fowler and Alfonso Lane, the three young chauffeurs charged with assaulting Herbert Emerson, the colored chauffeur of R. L. They were held in bonds of $100 each to the circuit court.

SEN. UTLEY TO SPEAK HERE TUESDAY NIGHT.

Judge E. J. Stahr asks us to announce that Sen. Newton W. Utley, of Frankfort, will open the Democratic campaign here next Tuesday night with a rousing Democratic speech at the Court House.

Sen. Utley is one of the best speakers in Kentucky and everyone is urged to come out on the occasion of his speaking. The Senator will also speak at Fulton next Monday night.

Chairman J. L. Smith says this will be the beginning of "setting the woods afire" with a hot campaign for the Democratic ticket.

Come out Tuesday night. Bring the ladies.

Little Miss Juanita Brooks entertained 10 of her friends in celebration of her fifth birthday anniversary on Tuesday afternoon. After a number of children's games, the little hostess invited her little friends into the dining room where dainty refreshments were served, consisting of cake, cream and fruits. Those present were: Martha Emily Dodds, Francis Rice, Alma and Hilda Coon, Mary V. Curlin, Ester Kinahro, Mozelle Housley, Augustus Schultz, Elizabeth and Louise Fleming.

TUBERCULOSIS CAUSES DEATH OF W. R. KING.

Wm. R. King, age 56, died at his home in this city Thursday, after a long illness of tuberculosis of the lungs. He had been bedfast for the past three months. The remains were interred at the city cemetery Friday, after funeral services conducted by Rev. W. C. Riggs.

Deceased had resided in Hickman about ten or twelve years, coming to this place from Dyer county, Tennessee. He was a member of the Methodist church, and highly respected by all. A wife, one child and two step-children survive him.

Mr. King was a quiet law-abiding, unassuming gentleman and his death is a source of regret to his many friends here and elsewhere.

Gate of Hoorn.

stand like isolated fortresses, massive, stately, lifting up their heads, keeping watch and ward over the sluggish, peaceful streams that flow beneath them, whose waters are now traversed by no craft more menacing than barges piled high with merchandise, and to whose banks the townspeople come with fishing rods for their only weapon.

The written words call up a vision of the beautiful gate of Amersfoort, that gay little garrison town, unhaunted by tourists, trim and full of color, the noble spire that is all that remains of the church of St. Mary standing sentinel above it. Here in the evening the narrow streets are full of soldiers coming out on leave, recruits, sunburned boys fresh from the plow in their pretty dark blue rectangular uniform caps, and here towards sunset may be seen a row of men and boys, their long fishing rods slanting to the river Eem, beneath the water-gate of Amersfoort, the Koppelpoort. It is a double gateway spanning river and road. The deep archway of the massive central block gives access to the city by water, and two of the guardian towers that flank it are connected by an archway, through which the road runs by the river.

Only Holland's own painters have ever caught the radiant clarity of her atmosphere and the warmth of coloring in her old buildings; here the softly flowing river, the pale green of the trees, which form a background for the warm red of the old brickwork, make up a picture whose charm would be unique elsewhere, but is common-to the veracious correspondent. William Manns, a farmer, has induced his sitting hens to increase the nation's game supply by 18 quail within the last week, with prospects of similar contributions for the future, the correspondent avers.

Manns says the mother quail, when grain in the fields is cut, leave their nests and do not return to them. Manns recently has found several such nests, it is said, with eggs in them. These he carried to his chicken house and placed under sitting hens. When the eggs hatch, he says, the young quail follow the mother hen about like chicks, but as soon as they are big enough to shift for themselves they fly away, forgetting their early domesticity.

Manns is urging other farmers in the vicinity to hatch the quail eggs.

The Fate of Many.
"It must be a great experience for a man to return to his native town and be received by a brass band."

"Yes, indeed. And it's much more agreeable than being received by a couple of detectives."

He never struts in borrowed plumage. He never takes selfish advantage of our mistakes. He uses no ignoble weapons in controversy. He never stabs in the dark. He is ashamed of inuendoes. He is not one thing to a man's face and another behind his back. If by accident he comes in possession of his neighbor's counsels, he passes upon them an act of instant oblivion. He bears sealed packages without tampering with the wax. Papers not meant for his eye, whether they flutter at his window or lie open before him in unguarded exposure, are sacred to him. He invades no privacy of others, however the sentry sleeps. Bolts and bars, locks and keys, hedges and pickets, bonds and securities, notice to trespassers, are none of them for him. He may be trusted alone, out of sight—near the thinnest partition—anywhere. He would rather fail of his rights than win them through dishonor. He will eat honest bread. He tramples on no sensitive feeling. He insults no man. If he has rebuke for another, he is straightforward, open, manly. In short, whatever he judges honorable he practices toward every man. How many such men can you name—besides yourself?

Of the many high class stories run by the Courier in recent years, none have been as popular as the opening chapter of "The Trey of Hearts," which was started last week. Our supply of last week's copies have been exhausted and we will be unable to furnish any more of the opening chapters, even though we have several requests for them. If favorable comment and popular approval count for anything, the new serial is one of the finest pieces of fiction that has come out in recent years.

Education is a great thing. The old fashioned man who used to have to hang around dark streets with a piece of lead pipe in order to make a living without working now has a son who sells mining stock.

When a man sees a sign that read, "This means YOU," he knows that it was put there to warn the other fellow.

QUEER ARE MARKETS.

Cattle markets are slack in America, despite the everlasting yell of the packers that the only reason for high prices for sirloin steak is a too small supply of home raised cattle. Wheat's selling at war prices despite a crop of 930,000,000 bushels which is sufficient to allow the export of all that can be sent to Europe this year without the normal home supply being encroached upon.

Why?

Simply because wheat speculators bought the crop at about seventy cents, stored it in their bins and planned to make millions out of the deal as soon as the first gun was unlimbered in Europe.

HICKMAN BOY PLAYS PART IN ROMANTIC WEDDING.

Friday's Fulton Leader: A surprise marriage took place about 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, but did not become public until this morning. The contracting parties were J. Don Bratton and Miss Vera Holt, daughter of Sam Holt, of Cedar street.

There has been some parental objection and it had been planned by the young people to have the wedding tonight. The young lady came down town yesterday afternoon, her lover joined her and they decided to get married at once. In order to avoid suspicion of their intention, Esquire J. L. Crockett's services were obtained and he married them as they walked together along the street. Nothing was said of the ceremony, the young lady returning to her home as if nothing had happened. She bundled up her clothes, wrote a note which she pinned to her pillow, telling her parents of her marriage, and about 10 o'clock last night the bridegroom came to steal away his bride. She slipped on a wrap, walked out the back door into the arms of the bridegroom, without being missed for some time.

The bride is a lovely young lady, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Holt, and has many friends. The groom is a popular young man, connected with the Shortsonitor establishment on Lake street.

The groom until a short time ago, resided in Hickman and is well known to many of our readers.

THE MOTHERS OF MEN.

By Joaquin Miller.

The bravest battle that was ever fought
Shall I tell you where and when?
On the maps of the world you will find it not—

Tis fought by the mothers of men.

Nay, not with cannon or battle shot,

With sword or nobler pen!

Nay, not with eloquent words or thought

From mouths of wonderful men.

But deep in the walled-up woman's heart—

Of woman that would not yield,

But bravely, silently, bore her part—

Lo, there is that battlefield!

No marshaling troops, no bivouac song,

No banner to gleam and wave;

But, oh! their battles, they last

From babyhood to the grave.

Yet faithful still as a bridge of stars,

She fights in her walled-up town—

Fights on and on in endless wars—

Then, silent, unseen, goes down.

Oh, ye with banners and battle shot,

And soldiers to shout and praise,

I tell you the kingliest victories fought

Were fought in those silent ways.

Oh, spotless woman in a world of shame,

With splendid and silent scorn

Go back to God as white as you came—

The kingliest warrior born!

GEORGE STALLINGS AND CONNIE MACK

News Snapshots Of the Week

Fears of raids by Zeppelin airships were expressed in England, and hundreds of aeroplanes were kept in readiness to repel an attack and to furnish news of immediate danger. Hundreds of wounded British soldiers were returned to England for treatment. The fighting along the river Oise continued, and many bridges were blown up to hinder the movements of the enemy. German artillery captured in France was taken to England to be exhibited as proof of the success of the allies. The converted cruiser Caronia, on which guns have been mounted, hovered around the port of New York searching outgoing steamers for Germans and contraband goods. Shipping men protested at such action as causing expensive delays. Managers George Stallings and Connie Mack lined their teams up in Philadelphia to begin the battles for the world's baseball championship. M. Turpin's deadly turpentine shells were used by France.

AMEN AND AMEN!

A writer from Paris says that the war is having a serious effect on fashions; that many dressmaking establishments are shutting down for their owners to go to the battlefield. The world would be better off if they never returned, and their places never reopened. The silver lining of this black war cloud may be found in the fact that we are to be released for a short time at least, from the immodest and disgraceful styles which began in Paris. It is a sad commentary on the world's good sense and good morals that the city where vice and crime are rampant, and which is famed as being the most wicked city in the world, sets the styles of dress and manners for the Christian world.

The apparel oft proclaims the man, and more often the woman. If the tough women of the French capital who are models for their gullible cousins on this side of the Atlantic find that war interferes with their continued sway, so much the better for war. — Elizabeth Town News.

LODGE NOTES

LEAGUE WILL TRY TO PLACE 10c. COTTON.

Seey. Doyle Jurney of the Young Men's Business Club has sent out the following letter to the commercial clubs at Louisville, Evansville, Paducah, Cairo, Nashville and Chicago, which is self explanatory:

"Dear Sirs:—

"If there is a concerted movement on the part of your Trade Organizations to buy cotton on the 'Buy-a-Bale movement,' we would like very much to receive our pro rata of your orders.

"Hickman is the only town in western Kentucky producing cotton and we annually gin from 5000 to 6000 bales. The greater portion of our cotton is grown in the bottom lands along the Mississippi river and is of a superior grade and staple.

"The Young Men's Business League will gladly execute any and all orders you may send us at 10c. per pound and these orders will be filled with cotton that will grade middling or better.

"We have no storage facilities here but the price includes delivery to either depot or the wharf boat. The rate on cotton from Hickman to _____, car lots, is _____; less than car lots is _____.

"Thanking you in advance for your consideration, we are,

"Yours truly,

DOYLE JURNEY, Secy."

We confidently expect to receive orders for more or less cotton on the basis mentioned, in order that we may purchase from all parties interested and without discrimination, a list has been prepared to receive signatures of those who wish to place some cotton at this price and through the League. The paper will be found at this office. The first man to sign will get our first order for a bale, the next will receive next and so on until we get around to No. 1 again. In other words orders will be filled, one bale at a time, until we reach the bottom of the list; then start at the top again. First come—first served. The list will not be presented to anyone. If interested, come and sign up.

Fulton county has the best dirt roads in this section of the country. The system used for the past two years is an improvement over the old one. A party composed of J. T. Stephens and wife and J. C. Sexton and wife returned last week from an automobile trip to Memphis, and outside of the gravel roads, which have an advantage over dirt roads only in wet weather, the dirt roads of West Tennessee do not compare with the roads in this county.

Having in mind the continued betterment of the roads of this county, the Young Men's Business League of Hickman are offering prizes for the best kept section of roads west of the M. & O. railroad. This is a matter that should have the support of all farmers as well as the business man, and it would be money well spent for the farmers to make a little donation to this prize list.

Any progressive farmer can figure for himself how much he saves in the course of a year when he begins hauling his crops to market. One man living near Hickman told us the other day that he hauled as much wheat in three loads over our present roads as he could in four loads before the present system of road working was installed. There is a list at this office of those who appreciate the roads we have, and we would be glad if every farmer could sign the list making a small donation for the further encouragement of the road contractors.

KERCHIEFS TO MATCH SUIT

Have Been Provided by the Designers in All the Newest and Most Popular Shades.

The group above shows the latest thing in colored handkerchiefs. These are to be carried with the tailored suit and must either match or harmonize in color. This is not difficult to accomplish, as all of the newest shades may be found. The arrangement of the colors is varied though simple, running principally to wide borders of colors with center of white or vice versa. An example of this is shown in the two upper designs which are violet and white. The handkerchief directly under these was of the new French tissue. It was of white with border stripes of a delicate blue and comes in all the standard colors in delicate shades. The lower center and right are white with woven figures in color and embroidered dots. The lower left has a plain white border and checkered, colored center.

FOR THE FILMY LAWN COLLAR

Special Make of Starch Is Needed to Keep Fragile Neckwear In Proper Condition.

Those fascinating filmy lawn and ornate collars are not such an extravagance as they may seem, if one knows how to launder them properly. True, the fragile things cannot usually be worn more than once or twice, as they show wrinkles as obviously as a linen shirtwaist. And the least bit of moisture reduces them to a limp rag.

But in their crisp, freshly laundered state they are undoubtedly fascinating, and obdurate, indeed, must be the woman, who passes them by. Poor laundering, however, renders these collars quite unfit for wear. The secret of doing them up right lies in the starch. Frequently ironing while wet imparts sufficient stiffness, but, if not, the collars should be starched in a mixture made as follows:

Add a piece of paraffin the size of an egg and a piece of white or castile soap the size of a hazelnut to a quart of boiling water. Mix the starch with cold water in a bowl, using whatever proportion of starch to a quart of water the particular brand of starch calls for to make a thin starch. Add the cold mixture to the boiling water and let it boil up two or three times. A smaller quantity may be made in proportion to the measurements given.

TO PROTECT DAINTY FROCK

One-Piece Pinafore Almost an Essential in the Wardrobe of the Small Girl.

A most useful addition to the child's wardrobe is the one-piece pinafore, which, made to cover a dainty frock, can be slipped on and off at a moment's notice, thereby solving the problem of keeping the child presentable during play-time, and also helping to curtail the weekly laundry bill. It should be made in galatea, brown holland, linen or any washing material that resists hard water. The pinafore is slipped over the head, and the making of it up offers no difficulties whatever, for the piece of straight material is just doubled (to the length of pinafore required), and then shaped at the neck and shoulders. It is fastened at the side with tapes, but little straps of the material fastened on one edge and buttoned on to the other can be used instead.

Pockets, of course, should be added to the apron, for children delight in these, and small designs, such as figures, animals, flowers, trees, etc., may be worked on them. It should be borne in mind, however, that all materials employed in these trimmings should be of a washable and durable quality.

Silver brocades and embroideries are lavishly used on the exquisite bridal gowns that are being made for the many weddings arranged for the next few weeks. Satin mouseline, even finer and more supple than charmeuse, is practically the only fabric with silver brocaded gauze introduced, and white roses and lilacs are the favorite flowers for bridal bouquets.

For the Small Girl's Coat.

Separate collar and cuff sets are made for the small girl's coat. Torchon and valenciennes, sometimes cluny and Irish point—are combined in these collars and cuffs, and they give a particularly dainty and fresh appearance to the simple, dark coats of serge or gabardine or silk on which they are used.

MRS. SAM GOUGER DIES
AFTER LONG ILLNESS.

Mrs. Sam Gouger, a resident of West Hickman, died at her home Monday after a year and a half illness of stomach trouble. She had been confined to her bed for several months.

Deceased was 39 years of age and is survived by her husband and three children. She was a daughter of B. Mathis, deceased, and was born and reared in Hickman, where she possessed a host of friends.

Burial occurred at the cemetery Tuesday.

Mrs. Gouger was a good woman; a sincere Christian. Her taking away is a great loss to her husband and little ones, and they have the sympathy of their many friends.

STR. CLYDE IN SERVICE
MEMPHIS TO CAIRO.

The packet Str. Clyde passed Hickman this morning on its first trip up from Memphis to Cairo. She carried some local freight and quite a number of passengers on her initial trip.

We are not informed as to her schedule, but understand the Clyde will make regular trips. The boat is one of the largest and speediest on the river, and well equipped for handling both freight and passenger traffic.

CARD OF THANKS.

I desire to thank our friends and the members of the Odd Fellow lodge for kindness shown us during the illness and death of my beloved husband.—Mrs. W. R. King.

County Judge Voris Gregory, of Graves county, was elected grand warden of the Odd Fellows Wednesday, at the state meeting at Frankfort. According to custom, in two years he will be grand master of the state. Judge Gregory is a young man, and very popular in Graves county. We are glad to hear of him being so highly honored.

For the Small Girl's Coat.

Separate collar and cuff sets are made for the small girl's coat. Torchon and valenciennes, sometimes cluny and Irish point—are combined in these collars and cuffs, and they give a particularly dainty and fresh appearance to the simple, dark coats of serge or gabardine or silk on which they are used.

PRICES STILL DECLINE.

SEED COTTON $1.75 to $1.90.

The price of cotton has steadily declined for several days past, and the outlook is very little, if any better, for an improvement in the situation. It is hoped that the $150,000,000 fund will pull us out of the ditch to some extent, but opinions differ as to the result it will bring about.

Under existing conditions, local buyers cannot pay more than $1.75 to $1.90 for seed cotton, as middling was quoted yesterday at 7c. And it may go lower.

Several of our planters, who have been shipping their cotton to Memphis and receiving an advance of $25 to $30, have received notice from their agents not to ship them any more cotton; that further advances would not be made.

CROSTIC-McGEHEE.

The wedding of Miss Crostic and James Beaty McGehee was solemnized Wednesday evening, Sept. 30th, at half past eight at the home of the bride near Cayce. It was one of the most artistic weddings of the early autumn, the colors were of gold, white and pink. The frequently used wedding bells hung in the center supported by strings of goldenrod fastened to each upper corner of the room. Two posts of white and pink roses were used to form an improvised gate, a decoration of evergreen occasioned with roses formed a thick background on the fireside and mantle, before which the ceremony was performed.

In the dining room the table was decorated with goldenrod draped the entire distance around and in the center was the beautiful wedding cake decorated with white and pink roses.

A delicious course of cream and cake followed by fruits were served.

The ceremony was performed by Bro. E. E. Spears, pastor of Cayce Methodist church.

Miss Carrie Barber, of Hickman, was maid of honor, beautifully robed in pink crepe de chine and carried a bouquet of pink La France roses trimmed in chiffon. Ben Johnson, of Los Angeles, Cal., acted as best man, and preceded the bride and groom with the maid of honor.

The bride was beautifully gowned in white crepe de chine and never was she so charming as when she was on the arm of the groom, carrying a beautiful bouquet of white bride roses, trimmed in white chiffon.

The groom wore a suit of dark blue serge.

The wedding gifts by their many friends and relatives were many, including silverware, cut glass, china, linen and beautiful crocheted work.

Mr. and Mrs. McGehee will remain at the home of the bride for only a short time in order to visit their many relatives before departing for Los Angeles, Cal., where they will make their future home after Nov. 1st.

The bride is the 19 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Crostic and is one of the sweetest girls of this community.

The groom is but 23 years old and is one of the most promising young men of his day. His occupation is bookkeeping and accounting. He is the youngest son of W. B. McGehee, a well known farmer of near Cayce. **
